HUSH-HUSH POLITICS

BRISTOL, PA., SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 19, 1947

When our national leaders say in one breath that they know lot of inside stuff which they don't dare tell the common people, and in the next complain that these common people are ignorant and indifferent as to national problems, just where do we come

Hush-hush government has been the fad ever since President Roosevelt came into power. He was everlastingly hinting that The little guests were: Ronald he knew a lot more about the facts than his critics did. Secret and Gloria Lyczak; George, Fred and diplomacy and back-room government were all the rage during his part of the New Deal.

When Hary Truman became President, a great many people thought that he would turn out to be a straight-forward, directminded sort of a soul, a simple, cornfed product of the "Show-Me" state—and that maybe the American people, as the real sovereigns of this country, were going to be told what it's all

But not so. Hush-hush politics continues. No one really knows what's what-unless he is one of the favored few who can slip in and out of the side door of the White House. Those who rely on ordinary sources of news, including official government statements, are told one thing one day, quite the contrary the next-and on the third day, that their "public servants" know stuff so hot they don't dare reveal it at all.

This is bad enough, but it becomes much worse when, from time to time, the public is scolded for not knowing what these secretive bosses of theirs carefully hide from them, and are, for stren will soon be ready for use, instance, blamed as the ones really guilty for Pearl Harbor when were two announcements made they were wholly in the dark about the background and circumstances of that affair.

Those who try to "add up" the few revelations which are made, and thus find out what the score really is, are roundly abused whenever their conclusions differ from the private and secret opinions of the country's top officials.

An instance of exactly this form of suppression on information on the one hand, and complaint of general public misunderstanding on the other, occurred a few days ago in the case of the address of Secretary of State Marshall to the Governors' Conference at Salt Lake City.

Note the following extract of his remarks, as released and used in the metropolitan newspapers:

"If it had been practicable for me to talk to you off the record and in great confidence, there is much that I would like to discuss with you. However, I must confine myself to the necessities of the time and the occasion.

What does this mean? That's rather obvious, Secretary Marshall knows some things which he considers of great interest and importance. five feet seven inches in height, They would help aryone understand the nature of our national and must weigh no more than 135 international problems. But he is unwilling for them to become known to the rank and file of the American people. He might be willing to tell them to Governors, sitting across the table and in the pledge of confidence-but just ordinary John Citizen, whose only interest is that this is supposed to be HIS government, and then men like Marshall are At first blush, it would seem supposed to be working for HIM, isn't to be tipped off about the real facts. Now read some of what followed in Secretary Marshall's address:

"I will say right now that the greatest problem I feel we have to deal with is in bringing the American public to a general understanding of the conditions involved at home and abroad.

Of course this is a problem. It will continue to be one just as long as those in Secretary Marshall's position continue to suppress facts essential to a clear understanding of those conditions. As the Secretary said elsewhere in his talk,

"To make up its mind, this country will need facts."

All right-granted. No argument. He might have gone much farther. the face of the applicant should be It is the essential duty of the American people, under our concept of such as to sink a thousand ships, government, to make the fundamental decisions on government policy The Secretary is complaining that the public "misunderstands" his own difficulties, and is not sufficiently sympathetic and cooperative with him sturdiest clock made and send in what he wants to do. He has much greater cause for complaint that Dracula and Frankenstein into the whole functioning of the democratic principle is being thwarted in this nation because he and others like him refuse to give the factual information necessary for citizens to vote intelligently.

But he himself makes abundantly clear that his real complaint should be against himself and his associates in the government. First he tion is that it would probably have announces he is going to treat the people of this nation as children, and tell them nothing he thinks might be bad for them, and then he complains of their lack of knowledge!

Let's come down to cases. What is there that the Secretary knows which he dares tell only men in such spheres as State Governors and tell them only "off the record" and under a pledge they won't pass the information along to the public? What can these high-pressure secrets be?

The country is at peace. We are at war with no one, Germany, Italy It seems that United will be and Japan are conquered and wrecked. The other principal nations were forced to worry along with its our Allies. Are some or all of these plotting against us? And if so, why present set of specifications and little or nothing which we dign't freely give her ahead of time. We let should it be kept a secret? Even in the case of Russia, she has taken keep hoping that the stewardesses her have half of Foland, ratified her hold on the Baltic and Balkan states who are going over the hill now then granted her control of Earope up to a line splitting Germany in half As to her failure to "cooperate" in the United Nations, we accepted her will, two decades later, send them proposal for a veto power which obviously was intended to be used to

If we don't like the way things are going, our target for complaint contracting matrimony. And face lies not so much in Stalin and Russia as it-does in the group of American it they will since there is hardly a leaders Marshall himself, the late President Roosevelt, and otherswho gave Russia the concessions which have caused the present trouble Is there anything outside the field of war preparations, spying, etc. which might be so sensitive that the Secretary of State wouldn't dare

> It is hard to think of anything other than war-preparations and espionage calling for such mystery.

If there is some nation which is secretly planning an attack on w and Secretary Marshall knows about it, isn't it his complete duty to tell lowa farmer, has set sail in a 34- the American people about it, in the loudest and clearest tones -not in

As to espionage, surely there aren't any American citizens so smug circumnavigate the world. Both as not to know that Russia has been keeping the closest sort of watch on us for years. The whole Federal government is riddled with pro-Communists who are able to pass along any type of information which Moscow wants-and that is especially true of the Secretary's own Depart-

If he's found a spy-ring, and thinks it's a hush-hush matter, he kidding no one but himself. Besides, isn't this also a matter which ought to be passed along to the people most concerned—the American When you come down to the meat of the matter, it is almost inconceivable that the Secretary of State can have in his possession any information which is so significant as to justify his hint that it would change the ordinary person's mind about our national policy, and still is of such navigation and supply. But ap- nature as to justify his suppressing it. There is a certain unhappy familiarity about the whole situation.

It takes one back to the summer and fall of 1941, when the same aroma of mystery surrounded all our international relations-when President, Secretaries of State and other spokesmen all hinted, just as have to worry about the housing Marshall is doing today, of great secrets which they didn't dare tell just shortage, strikes and international the average American man or woman And they were full of assurances that everything would come out right, if the people would just "trust them." They also complained that the citizens from whom they carefully kept the facts were restless and The disaster at Pearl Harbor knocked most of the complacency out of the nation's leaders. It took a lot of blood, and an untold amount of acrifice-which is still going on to recover the ground lost by this ountry in a single sneak attack. Frankness at the proper moment might have changed the military Good time: Any activity that history of that period, just as frankness after it might have changed a great deal of subsequent political history.

At any event, with many of the same figures who were in command without creating a longing for a in those days still at the throttle, we are passing through a new fog of the same old type of hush-hush secrecy. What lies ahead?
